We, the Class of 2018, are the only group primarily consisted of millennials whose age corresponds with the year we are in. We were 14 in 2014 when we first entered the high school as optimistic freshmen, new to the overwhelming amount of staircases and confusing hallways. Now as 18 year olds in 2018, we leave cherishing the finite amount of days left in our last year before we go on different pathways.

welcome to WOBURN

01801 is more than just numbers. These familiar five digits we've jotted down on forms, envelopes, and applications not only embody our zip code, but serve as an emblem of the places we've become so familiar with. They represent a strong and unique community; a place where most of us grew up, a place we call home. With a population of over 38,000 citizens, generations after generations continue to live here and come back to raise families of their own here because of the charm our little town has, the way we care for each other, and the way we help each other to be our best.

This town is packed with memories for us, loaded with bits of nostalgia from our collective childhood. As children, we remember staying up late to watch the lighting of the trees at the Festival on the Common, and wearing costumes while racing to snatch another piece of candy at the Halloween Parade down on Main Street. The winters were a time of ice skating at the Joyce and waiting for the phone call from the superintendent, hoping for a snow day. The center was where we all gathered together, celebrating the city's anniversary, or got our cars washed to support our sports teams. We have fond memories of Flag Day; spending time with our friends and hearing the music blast in our ears with vast groups of people all crowded together on Library Field. For many of us, it's little moments like these that will always have a special place in our hearts and be a part of us no matter where life takes us.

01801 isn't just a set of numbers or a silly zip code. It's a time capsule of the good times we've all shared. As we face our bittersweet graduation from the halls of Woburn High School, many of us may start a new journey and find ourselves leaving to chase our dreams and pursue our goals elsewhere. No matter where we end up, Woburn will still always have a place in our hearts.

George Whitfield, Lauren Harkins, Hannah Macintosh-Gomez, Emma Valentine, Nora Newman, Matthew Juko, and Maureen Sullivan love hanging out at the Boys and Girl's Club. Gina Farrell, Camille Bruen, and Kristina Marashio hang out by the Brickyard. Jamilly Pacheco, Katelyn Wackrow, Sarah Weber, Mackenzie Galvin, and Ali Hurley pose in the heart of Woburn Center. Catherine Turgiss, Mary Hamilton, and Jacey Woods love Lions Park.

what it means TO US

When asked to think about what reminds us of Woburn, nearly everyone would mention Horn Pond with a fond smile. Horn Pond is the place we all knew growing up; it's where we ran around at Lion's Park as children, to where Cross Country competitively races through the sacred ground presently. It's where mothers go to talk while leisurely pushing strollers, and where kids go to explore the several different trails through the scenic woods. High school hangout spots Rag Rock and Horn Pond Mountain, where students leave their mark through activities like graffiti, late night camping, and hiking, are popular as well. No matter one's activity preference, there's something for everyone at this serene location.

But all of this didn't exist without an intriguing history. Legend tells us that there once was a Native American tribe known as the Aborigines who firmly believed in the "Great Spirit," called Manitou. Manitou was known to admire his reflection in the deep, clear waters of the formerly called Lake Innitou, presently known as Horn Pond. The tribe was attracted to the signs of good fortunes, such as "flights of birds" and "jumping fish," the area offered. Just as the tribe fell in love with Lake Innitou and its abundance of potential, our families today were attracted to similar key aspects of Woburn, such as its sense of community and quality of living. Our parents raised us as Tanners, many of us starting at a young age through elementary school, middle school, and up until high school now. Many of us also moved here recently, charmed by the fantastic city and opportunities it has. We live and breathe in the Tanner spirit every morning at 7:00 am when we all trickle into the front doors, meeting with our friends and passing by our friendly advisors. Though our footsteps through that entrance every morning continue to dwindle, we will always have this yearbook to treasure with us and reflect upon, like Manitou's reflection gleamed upon the waters of Lake Innitou, for generations to come, while also reassuring us that no matter where we end up in life, despite any obstacles we may face, we'll always have a home here IN Woburn.

Can you say Spirit?

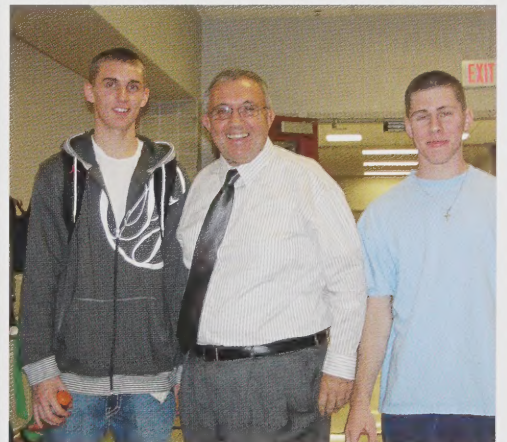

When it comes to participating in events, the staff loves to have FUN especially during spirit week and the pep rally. Mr. Campbell and Ms. Vogel show the students how to win the lip synch battle. Mr. Gill gets the crowd going. The gym is packed with staff looking on. Mr. McDonough and Ms. McMahon cheer on the students. Mr. Bromley's class wearing their PJ's for spirit week. Principal Callanan and Assistant Principal Patrissi show their matching school color outfits.

Dedication

This yearbook is dedicated to Mr. Ralph Deldon, our Assistant Principal who will be retiring this year after serving the Woburn Public School system since 1995. Mr. Deldon began his career at Woburn Memorial High School as a science teacher and then became assistant principal. We would like to thank Mr. Deldon for his many years of service to the school community. His smile and kindness will always be remembered.

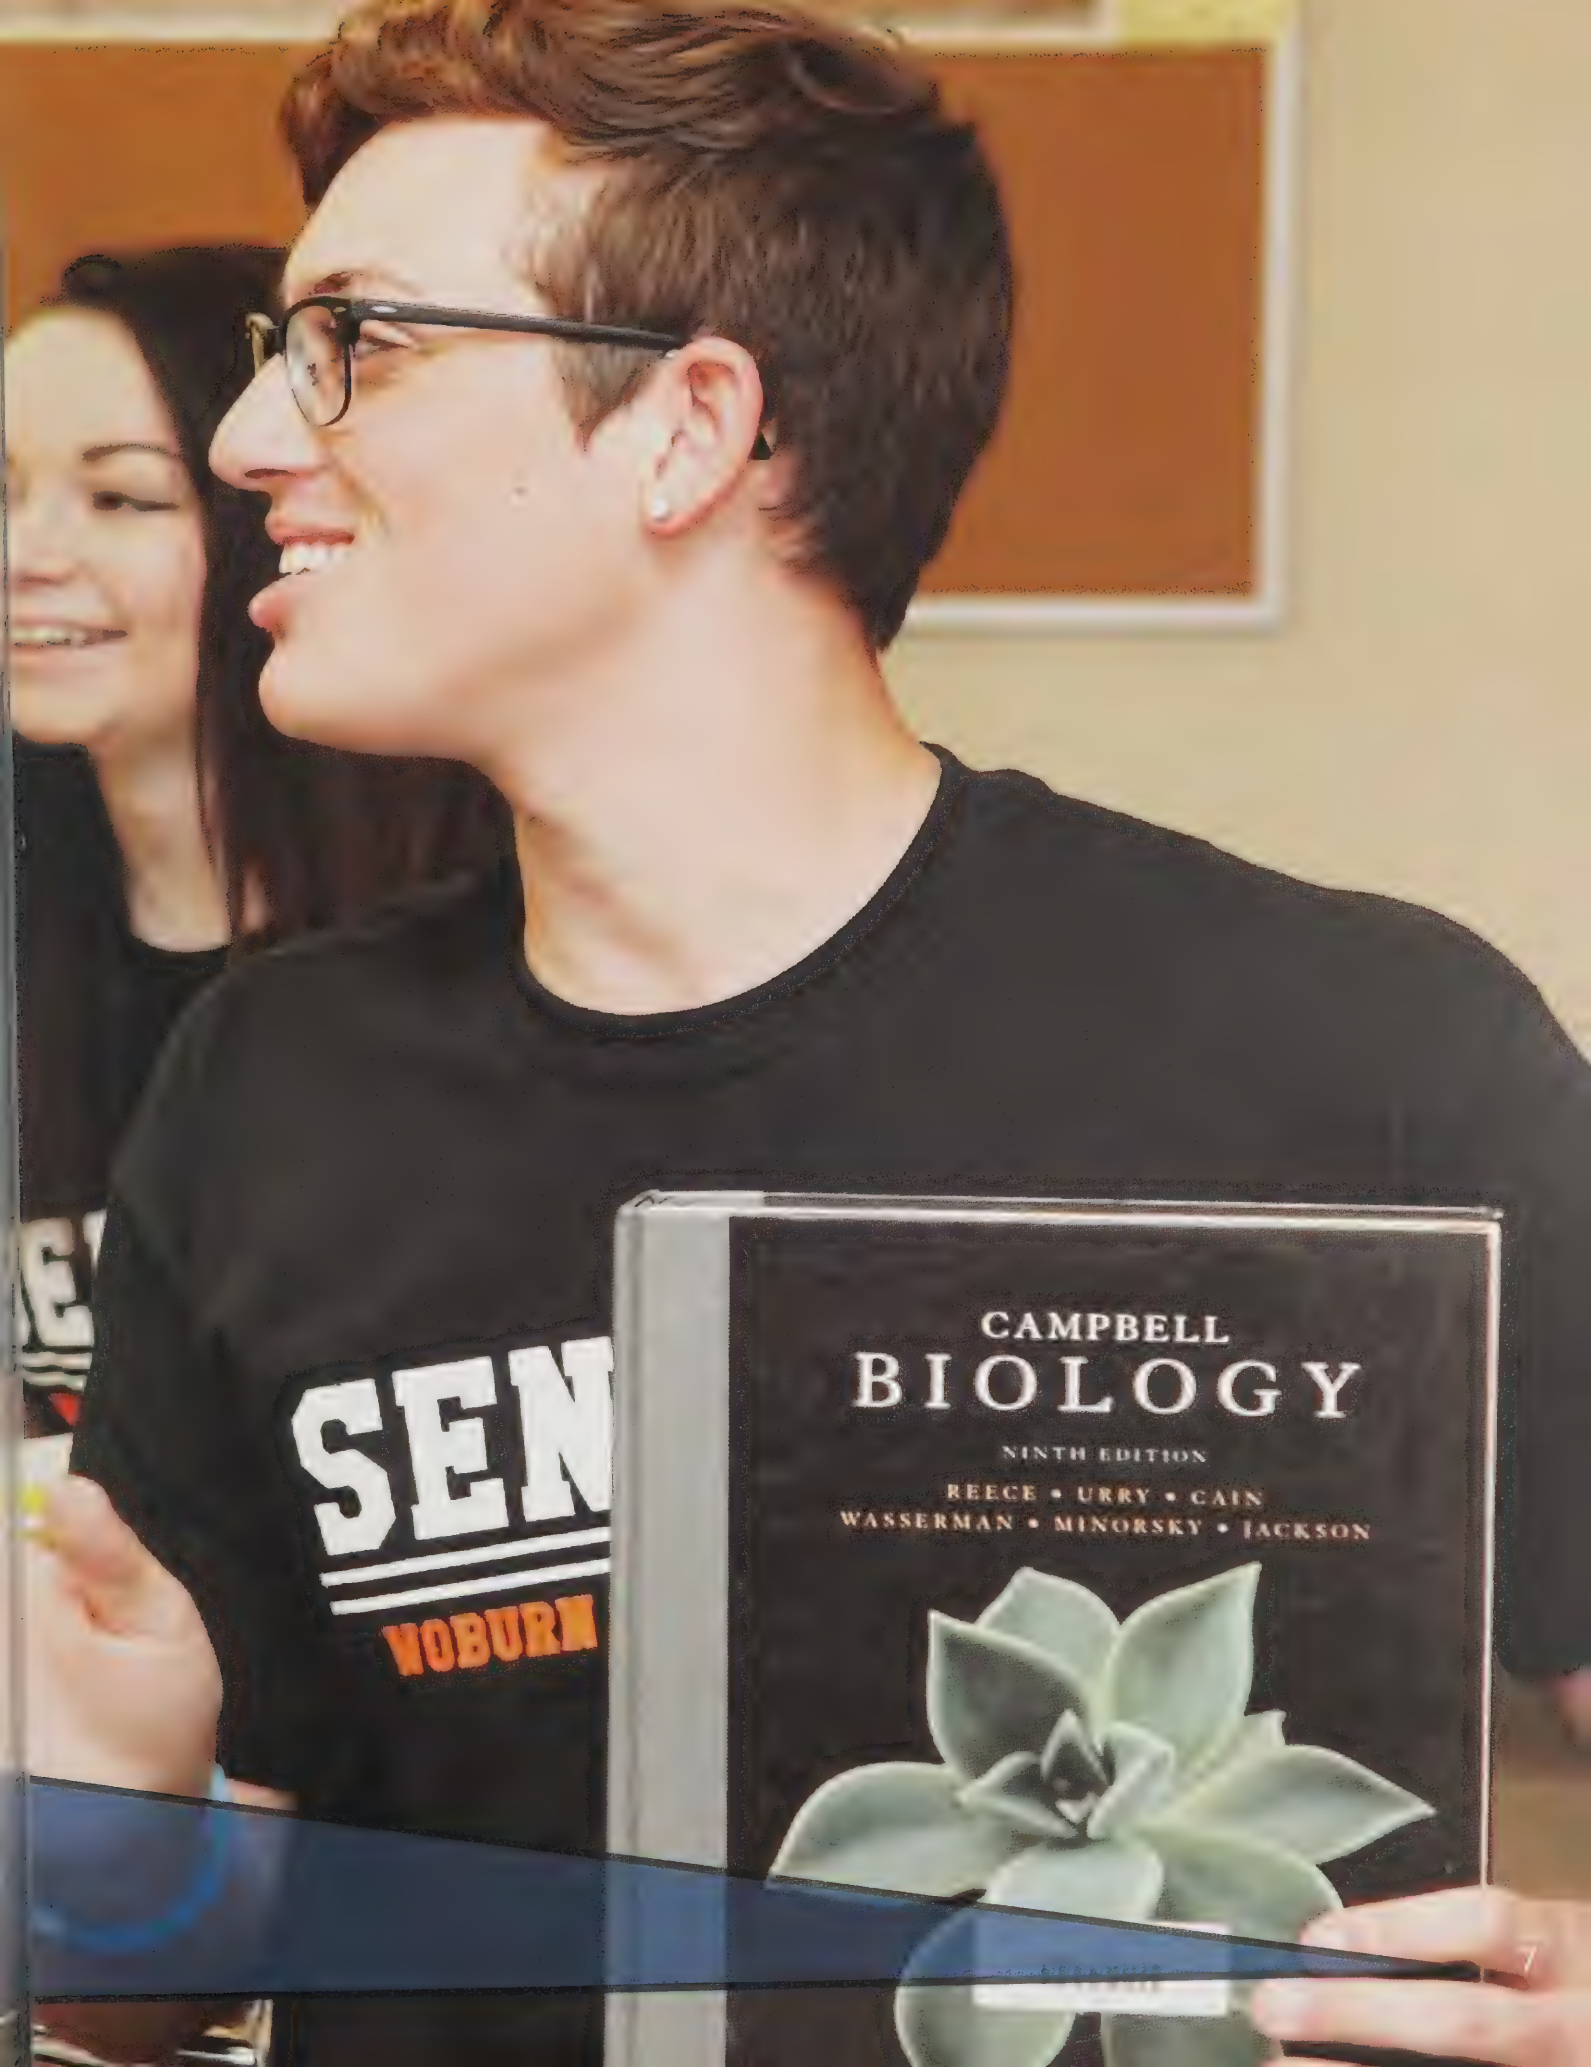

A background photograph of a classroom. On the left, a student in a dark t-shirt is seated at a desk. On the right, another student is partially visible, holding a book. The room has a wooden wall and a whiteboard.

It was uneasy transitioning from cubbies to lockers, from one main teacher to 7 different teachers, from the Joyce's Mr. Keane and the Kennedy's Mrs. Brodeur's relatively simple English classes, to Ms. McMahon's ever-challenging one. All the essays we've written, books we've read, and tests we've taken were challenging, but we knew that one day all that hard work would pay off. Fortunately, we made it through overwhelming classes like chemistry, thanks to Mr. Kaufman's incredibly dry sense of humor, survived the torment from essays in English by listening to Mr. Gangi's hilarious stories, and endured the endless equations in math due to Mr. Skeff's inspiring advice, teaching us life lessons applicable to our impending journey after high school.

Walking past the emblem of tanner pride at the entrance of Woburn High for the last time as seniors, we get flashbacks of all the homecoming, freshman, and sophomore dances held at the foyer, and our sports teams lined up, giving each person a high five as they entered the school, bleeding black and orange every morning before the pep rallies. We will look back on this chapter of our lives remembering not only our journey, but the experiences we made along the way with moments of both agonizing stress and rewarding happiness.

Oh Baby!

When life was simple...

We took our first steps with twinkles in our eyes and said our first words with bright smiles. Peacefully oblivious to the world around us, we played with our Cabbage Patch Kids and Legos, tumbled around in our diapers, and climbed on the monkey bars at Library Park. With our chubby faces and cute poses, we've grown up from infants to children with ease.

keep moving FORWARD

Children first

Waking up early was just as difficult as letting go of our parent's hand on our first day of kindergarten at one of the ten elementary schools. It was a bright, sunny day of September when we made our way into a new place for the next six years. This marked the very start of our journey towards mastering our ABC's and 123's, learning jingles to remember the days of the week, and trading our silly bands and Pokémon cards –which never got old. Playing four square at the playground was a time of competition, field trips to the Museum of Science were a time of adventure, and holiday shows were a time of proudly singing songs like "Jingle Bell Rock." None of us could wait until Field Day where we competed with other classes and rushed to be the first to get a slushie on that hot June day.

Preteens second

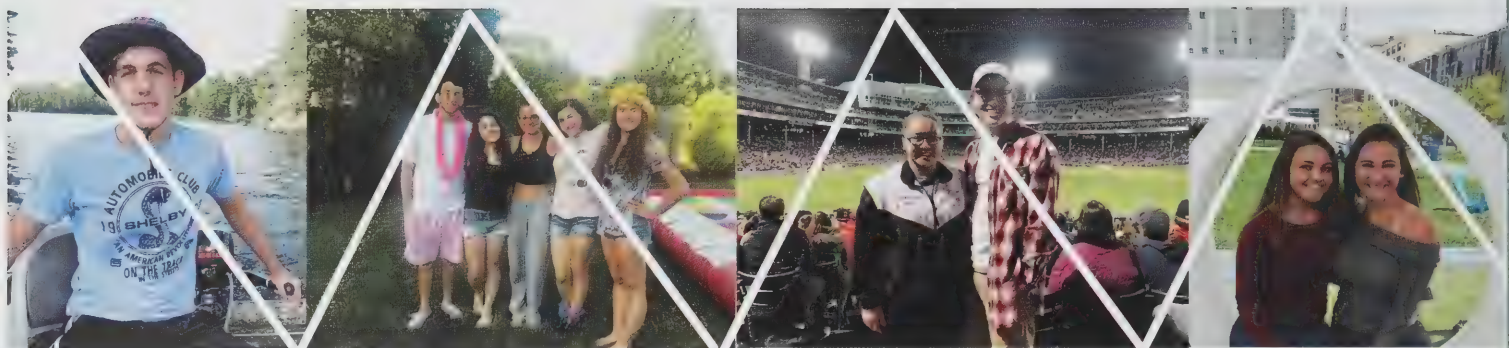

For most of us, it's embarrassing to look back on these years since it was a phase of smiling with our braces and modeling cringe outfits. Here, we were introduced to new classes like wood shop and cooking and challenged with trying to remember our locker combinations so we wouldn't be late for class. It was the first time we were split into teams, introduced to new faces from different elementary schools. Every day was a struggle carrying our heavy Trapper Keepers in the small, cramped hallways. On Fridays after school, we hung out with friends in the Joyce's gym for the drop off and we took mirror selfies doing the famous duck face and posed with peace signs. Although many people prefer not to reminisce about this often awkward time in their lives, we can't deny that it was a time of growth and self-discovery.

soaking up the SUN

On a hot summer day, we find ourselves at Nanabette's stuffing our faces with ice cream to cool down, or strolling around the trails of Horn Pond to find peace. We've made endless runs to Dunks to grab a drink and countless stops at Bill & Bob's to grab a bite. Summer has always been devoted to spending time with family and friends, where we can push all of our books and school work aside for a moment and enjoy spending time with family and friends. It's a temporary escape from teachers, after school meetings, studying, stress, and best of all, homework. Later curfews and being able to drive make summer the perfect time for watching the fireworks, hosting pool parties and barbecues, going on road trips, and attending the hottest concerts of the season. From days at the beach going for a swim and getting a nice tan to nights gathering around a bonfire, roasting s'mores and telling crazy stories from our past, we take time to bond with our closest friends and enjoy our freedom away from school

Max Marshall, Nate Jardine, and Alana Lally strike a pose at Relay for Life, Brianna Lundin and Liz Werner smile in the sand, Cassie Palmisano and Marissa Gregory are surrounded by bubbles in Punta Cana, and Juliana Parise and Lauren Harkins hang out in some inner tubes. Robert Dickey, Bobby DiLorenzo, Zach Carter, John Downs, and Taylor Lages rock their red, white, and blue swim trunks. Julie Miller and Maureen Sullivan hang out in New Hampshire, Heather Crann, Avery Leydon, and Kylie Leydon spend a night in Rhode Island. started from the bottom

As soon as we walked through the doors of Woburn High, we were greeted by flashes of a camera as a photographer took pictures of us off guard in our back to school outfits we planned the night before. While walking past the Tanner Pride emblem on the floor, Mr. Deldon greeted us by reminding us of the lunch schedule and to start the day in homeroom. Freshman year, for many of us, was an exciting beginning in a new building, hoping to make new friends; for others, it was filled with nerves, like trying to find a place to sit at lunch. We held on tightly to our schedules, constantly getting lost in the crowded hallways and trying to find the H wing. Walking all the way up to the fourth floor had us out of breath every time and was something we've never gotten used to. It was rewarding to take time off our history classes on the first Friday of every month to talk and play the number game with our mentors. This was also the year of the huge snowstorm that hit New England, giving us a lot of much-needed snow days.

step BY step

After months of suffering through the stressful times of school, almost all of us were looking forward to taking a little break to enjoy some time with friends at our Freshmen Dance. It was the first of many dances we attended where we were able to miss class to decorate the foyer in a Gatsby theme, eagerly awaiting for the night to begin. Dressed in black and red, we all jammed to Fergalicious and Shake it Off once the beat dropped, then enjoyed the rest of the night grabbing a bite at Bickford's.

A group of girls put their hands up at the dance. Emily Cloonan and Marissa Gregory pose in their boas. Kathryn Leonard and Mirriam Mananah both have a great time. Ben Turner and Michael Speros pose for the camera. Alex Brinkley knows he's about to have a great night. Gabriela Ortiz and Juliana Parise take an adorable picture together. Dustin Burkle, Brendan Tumwesigye, Nicholas Metrano, and Zachary Carter strike a pose. The Class of 2018 dance the night away. Benjamin Sawyer and Myron Masotta live it up. Alexa Addezio throws up a peace sign. John Downs raises the roof in his bright teal shirt and tie.

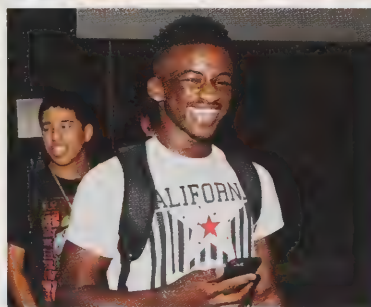

guess who's BACK?

As sophomores, we felt more confident in ourselves after spending a year adjusting to our new school and prepared to perform our best in all the ways we could. What better way to prepare ourselves for a long day of school best than by making a run to Dunks bright and early? Although it was a nice way to treat ourselves, we had to sneak it upstairs since bringing coffee to class was banned. The few minutes we had in between classes were spent singing along to "Breaking Free" and "Girl on Fire" after requesting songs to be played on every Friday's dancing to the beat

Though we didn't gamble in casinos and sneak into nightclubs, we had the time of our lives at our Vegas-inspired Sophomore Semi. Throughout the entire day of school, the dance was constantly on our minds leaving us eager to get dismissed at 11 so we had more than enough time to look our best. The preparation was stressful and nerve-wracking, especially trying to get the corsages on our dates. But when DJ Dan turned up the music, we trampled our cares and worries with our bare feet on the dance floor, doing the whip and nae-nae all night long. The night didn't end until we stopped by The Restaurant with our friends and ate until our rides were ready to pick us up.

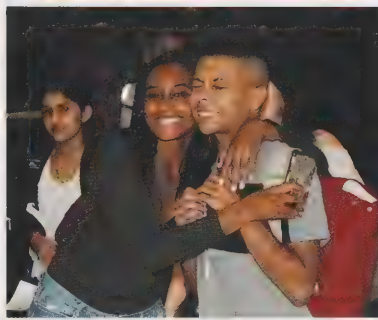

Angela Taft, Gina Farrell, Samantha Otis, Alexa Addezio, and Grace Goddard look stunning in their dresses. Carolyn D'Addario and Jennifer Thach are posing before the dance. Emma Valentine and Katie Campbell hang out in the cafe. Mohmmadazhar Khalifa is having a good time. Erin Doane and Madison Russo strike a pose before the dance starts. finally upperclassmen

Junior year, the most difficult year of them all. Nothing could prepare us for the daunting tasks of writing college essays and waking up early on a Saturday morning to take the SATs and ACTs at 8am. Although it felt rewarding to finally be upperclassmen, we struggled trying to pass classes like Ms. McMahon's English class or Mr. Pandolph's math class all while battling procrastination. But on the bright side, there was powderpuff against the seniors and finally getting our licenses to park at school instead of taking the dreadful bus every morning, making all the stress we endured worth it in the end.

Time to Unwind

After months trying to find the perfect dress, we made sure no one else had the same one by sharing it on the junior prom Instagram account. At six o'clock on that warm day of April, we arrived at the high school to snap photos with our close ones who were ready to send us off to prom. With our cars and limousines, we drove down Montvale Ave, making our way to the Hilton only to get greeted by Mr. Walsh wishing us a memorable night. Before we sat in our reserved tables, we got pics with Ms. Tighe and Mr. Bromley and indulged on the cookies and cupcakes from the refreshments table. There was always time for posing with our friends, wearing goofy hats and glasses in the photo booth or getting professional pictures done with a date. It was worth waiting in the long line for food because the delicious taste of the tortellini kept us going back for seconds. Unlike the other school dances, we weren't confined to Woburn High's foyer, but instead spent all night belting out the lyrics to "That's What I Like," lined up to do the Cotton Eyed Joe and Cupid Shuffle, and cranked that Soulja Boy on the dance floor.

Now, we're here

We made it. Ever since we were freshmen, we've wanted the perks that only seniors get to experience. It was finally our turn to sit in the front rows of the fan sections at Connolly Stadium, to eat with our friends in the senior cafe (granted there were enough chairs), to be the captain of our sports teams and lead our clubs, and best of all, to leave school earlier than everyone else. We heard the last school bell ring, dismissing us from our last class with Mr. Gill and his endless class discussions, or with Mr. Bromley and his unforgettable sarcastic jokes as we walked for the last time in the hallways we once decorated in black and orange for spirit week. Graduating was something we've always dreamed of and couldn't wait for as the last days of high school approached us, leaving us memories to hold onto forever.

ZONES

Fearless we are in every game, meet, and match, leaving our hearts and souls whether on the track, field, court, or pool. Woburn's beloved coach Bill O'Connor motivated and prepared each of his runners to earn the Middlesex League Champions title for three consecutive seasons. After the legendary coach Rocky Nelson's retirement last season, new head coach John Belcher stepped up in the hopes of steering the boys towards a successful season.

Blood, sweat, and tears athletes shed in their unstinting effort, putting their best foot forward, ready to give it their all. Whether it be on the benches on a chilly Friday night at Connolly Stadium watching the game in black and orange, or on the field competing against our toughest rival, Lexington, there is Tanner Pride that runs deep in the hearts of everyone that is unmatched to any other school. A win or a loss, we are there to show an endless amount of support for our basketball teams as we follow them on their road to the Garden and the football team on their road to Gillette. It's this pride and spirit we proudly carry with us as we move forward in not only athletics, but every part of our lives, connecting us to the 01801.

Part of the reason why we've had so much success at this school may be contributed to our community here in the 01801. Our teachers, counselors, mentors, and our classmates have motivated us to do the best in our abilities, on the playing field or perched on a desk, every day we entered the front doors in the morning. As we acknowledge the familiar faces we've grown up with these past four years, we're started to think that we won't see all of them after we graduate. Going to sports games, meets, proms, plays, musicals made us value the time spent with our close friends and peers by our side through it all.

We've connected with our guidance counselors, bonded with our teachers, and created friendships with our classmates. However, our reputations are not only confined to our school. Neighboring towns and cities have seen us bright, intelligent students graduate and become successful in the paths we choose to follow.

where in the World?

We all come from different places across the globe and express our cultural backgrounds. Our backgrounds, ethnicities, and nationalities are the qualities that make a big impact on who we are. From all the way to India to Bulgaria, the diversity we experience first hand throughout our school is very special and eye-opening.

Lilya Driek is from Lebanon and there she goes to the beach and spends time with family.

Nicole Akhian is from Armenia.
Christian Deulofeu is from Argentina.

Carlos Ortiz is from Mexico. Linh Tran is from Vietnam. Maheen Bilal is from Pakistan. Ashton Horton is from Kansas. Ana Maria Ivanova is from Bulgaria.

Many of us have goals we hope to one day achieve and accomplish in our lifetimes. Some items on our bucket list may be exotic, like traveling to a foreign country, or they may be a bit more ambitious, like skydiving. Either way, we all strive to check off activities from our bucket lists to motivate our passion and drive for adventure.

After a long day's worth of school work, it's relieving to escape the stress and participate in something that brings you joy, something you love to do. Some of us found our escape through music by passionately singing notes in the acapella choir, or effortlessly playing high notes of the trumpet in band. For others, it was volunteering time into community service in Spreading Sunshine and being a good role model to others in LEARN.

With over 40 different clubs and activities, there were countless ways to get involved with both the school and with our community. Whether it be making new friends in Best Buddies or helping to save the Earth in Green Team, these activities not only gave us something fun to look forward to, but gave us experiences outside of the classroom where we found new passions and created new connections, helping us define the road towards our futures.

let's get LOUD

The pep rally is the perfect way to conclude spirit week and jumpstart Thanksgiving break. It is what truly brings everyone together in the most competitive and exciting ways possible. After wearing white freshman year, to all black sophomore year, and from all orange junior year, we confidently embraced every color on our homemade shirts senior year. From the football team desperately searching for the playbook with the help of Woburn Woman saving the day to Mr. Scarborough channeling his inner David Bowie, the 2017 pep rally was one to remember.

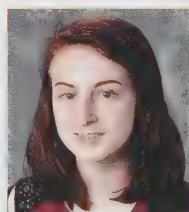

OUR FAVORITE THINGS ABOUT PEP RALLY

Ryan Chillemi

Hallie Buote

Abigail Thomas

Chassidy Boland

The teacher flash mob, lip sync battles, hula-hoop contest, pie in the face, band and step team.

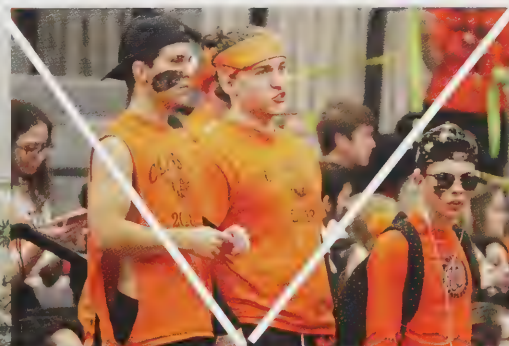

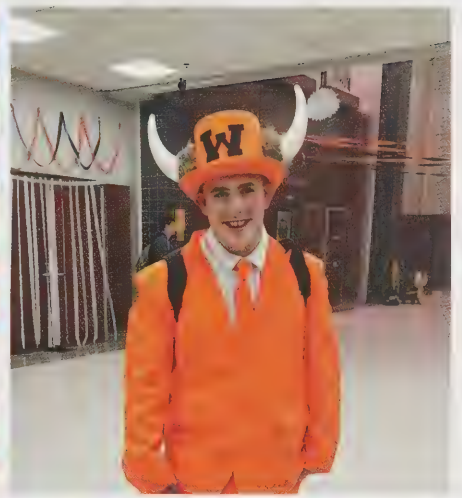

Olivia Pernick prepares for the pep rally by folding towels. Sabrina Gubnitsky performs a dance routine. Our group of Juniors screams as loud as possible. Myron Masotta has the best orange suit and bull horn hat. A group poses in their matching white shirts and khakis. The MC's Madison Russo, Matthew Pollard, and Marissa Gregory liven up the crowd. Katelyn Wackrow and Rachel Richards work on making a poster for the seniors. Serena Byford and Bailey Clurman pose and show their Tanner pride. A group of girls show off their 80's themed outfits for spirit week.

Alison Pacek and Juliana Parise work on pep rally posters. A group of tourists point towards the attractions of Mrs. Smith's room. Zachary Carter, Noah Evans, and Keith Webb mediate the pep rally and Patricia Arguetta hops on her friend Katie Campbell's back.

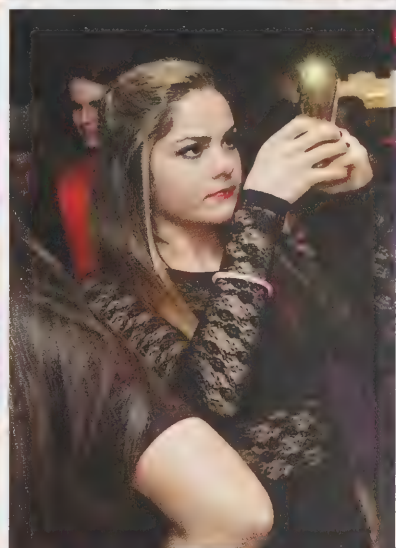

hanging at HOMECOMING

After the first few months of our stressful senior year, November 17th came along, marking the best and last Homecoming for us as students. As always, it's difficult getting tickets for the dance since everyone in every grade wants to go. Some of us showed up to school at 6:30 in the morning to stand in the long line in hopes for tickets before they ran out, since some of us waited until the last minute to get them. Although the music may have been average and the school ran out of water, it didn't stop us from dancing under the glowing lights spread throughout the foyer and hanging in the cafe. Our fun didn't end after the clock struck 11; instead, we spent the rest of the cool night going out to eat with our friends (and nearly all of Woburn High) at the closest restaurants we could find.

Our smart senior class smiles for the camera. Molly McCaffery, Justin Costa and Amanda Parker flaunt their awards. Juliana Parise, Brendan Tumwesigye, and Carolyn D'Addario are proud of their certificates. Maureen Sullivan and Mirriam Manana also show their certificates. Ramla Hagi, Kaitlyn Walsh, Gurbinder Singh, Heather Crann, and Erin Doane are representing Youth and Government at the ceremony. Lauren Harkins, Shane Crawford and Andrea Schiavone pose with their roses. Angela Taft, Gina Farrell, Camille Bruen, and Erica Malho show off their awards. Brianna Savino and Olivia Perenick are excited for the ceremony.

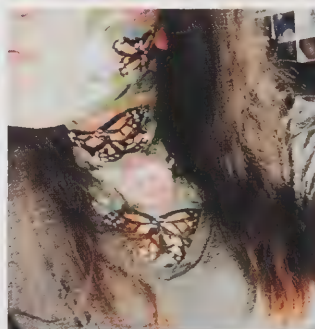

By spending countless hours doing homework, studying, participating in extracurricular activities, and ultimately, trying our best, we were able to present our excellence through scholarship, service, leadership, and character during the NHS induction. On this night, nothing entertained us more than Mr. Donovan's pun-ny speech that had us guessing names of countries. With our family in the audience cheering once they heard our names, we got up to receive a certificate and rose for our achievement after going up to proudly shake everyone's hand with bright smiles on our faces.

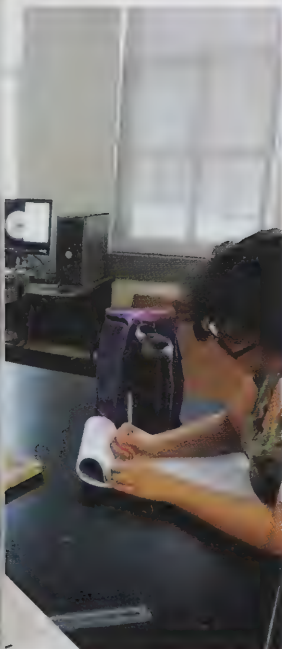

Sabrina Gubnitsky works on perfecting her gumball machine painting. Samantha Otis and Darragh Quinn work on their paintings. Fatima Karim works on her drawing. Emma Valentine's drawing of a woman is very detailed. Britney Braga experiments with painting butterflies. Luther Thiogene's painting of a tree is very beautiful. J Gonsalves focuses on painting with precision. Kelly Bishop shows off her interpretation of the school hallway. Fatima Karim and Hannah Macintosh work on their designs. Britney Braga's hand painting looks amazing and realistic.

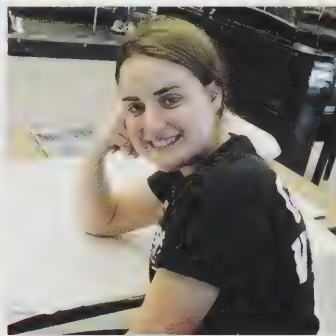

a stroke of GENIUS

Art is visible in nearly all aspects of Woburn High. Artwork by students is portrayed on the walls, dedicated students stay after for Art Club on Tuesdays to work on their masterpieces, and students take classes like Ceramics and Painting with Mrs. Childs, computer graphics with Mrs. Thifault or photography with Ms. Dugan hitting the perfect NOTE

Nothing gets the crowd of students excited and pumped up more than our talented band and chorus. Hearing the passion through the notes and instruments of covers like Thriller, or the chorus singing songs during school productions help elevate our levels of Tanner pride.

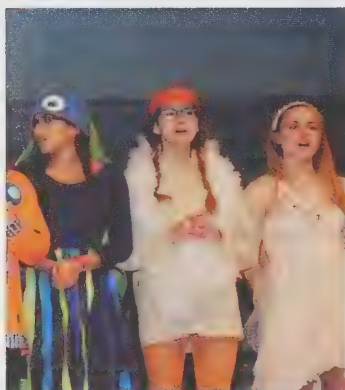

George Whitfield prepares to lead the band during a performance. Samantha Sutton and Tess Flaherty prepare to play their instruments. Raychel Gomes smiles for the picture. Max Marshall is focused on his work. Nora Newman plays her trumpet with a fierce passion. Rawiyah Nakyanzi waits for her cue to sing. A group of girls perform some songs for Chorus. Nathaniel Jardin bangs on the drum while Gabe Antunes clashes the cymbals. Patricia Argueta intricately plays the piano.

Madison Vecchi reaches for the sky. Katie Campbell, Madison Vecchi, and Patricia Arguetta pose as maids during the play of Beauty and the Beast. Krishna Kalari and Katie Campbell recite their lines to the audience. Emma Valentine poses in her costume. Lia Fialkosky plays her role well. A group performs a dance number for the audience. Erica Malho supports Raychel Gomes after her show. Patricia Arguetta puts on a fantastic show. The drama club puts on their iconic The Little Mermaid performance.

For the past four years, the Drama Club got the excitement going for the musicals of Beauty and the Beast, The Little Mermaid, Mary Poppins, and The Addams Family. They have dedicated countless hours into perfecting every single line with Mr. Gilbertie, Ms. Smith, Ms. Scholnick after school. Once the day came, the cast poured their hearts and souls into their performances and put so much effort into their work whether its on the stage, singing and dancing, or behind the scenes, setting up props and costumes.

OUR WAY

While some of us don't even know what we're having for breakfast tomorrow, many of us already know where we're going to be 20 years from now. Once our high school career comes to an end, we will all take on different paths to pursue our dreams. Whether we're traveling the world, or going to college, the future ahead of us has never been brighter.

a look into our time in D129

A little info...

1. April of our Junior year was the time for yearbook advisors, Mrs. Thifault and Mrs. Getherall, to select a new yearbook staff. We earned our spots after filling out an application and being interviewed.

2. We started by designing the cover and coming up with a theme with Herf Jones Representative Susan Happel. It took us four tries and lots of Roma's pizza to get it done.

3. Josh became our photoshop expert. Julie designed all of the sport pages. Ramla spent hours writing all of the stories for the pages. Erica and Bailey were inventive choosing and creating the best templates to perfect the book. If spacing was off on a page, you would call on Heather to make those changes. Mary wrote creative captions to go along with the photos, and Lauren helped find any missed errors.

4. Every single page of the book was custom designed during 7th period and any time after school. We sometimes stayed till four o'clock after school to finish any incomplete pages before their deadlines.

5. Before these pages were sent off to the plant in Kansas, MO, where they would be proofed and color corrected, our advisors Mrs. Thifault and Mrs. Getherall checked everything to make sure they looked perfect.

6. Once the pages came back proofed, we edited and fixed the pages one last time before they were permanent and the book was finished.s

Special thank you to our rep. Susan Happel and our cover designer Ashley Joiner, Matt Giglio our photographer from Portrait Experience and Joe Brown for several sports photos.

Some members of the staff attended a three day Journalism Education Association and National Scholastic Press Association Convention in Dallas, TX. They attended over 40 workshops in leadership, design, photography, writing, and marketing. These skills of collaboration, creativity, problem solving and communication can be used for the rest of their lives. Most importantly, the students had a "real world" opportunity of traveling, staying at a hotel, exploring a new culture and city, attending a conference and meeting new people. Both Mrs. Thifault and Mrs. Getherall commented, "Words cannot express how proud we are of the staff. They were kind, polite, responsible, engaged, motivated and truly appreciative of this opportunity. They made Woburn High and the City of Woburn proud by being model students on this trip. We are so fortunate to be their yearbook advisors."

go big or GO HOME

The team making decisions on the final pages. The Yearbook Staff looks comfy in their PJ's at Logan Airport. Erica and Bailey take a break on the couch while Julie and Ramla have fun designing. Mary and Josh get ready for the long flight home from Texas. Heather's picture is taken by surprise and Lauren photobombs a photo of our advisors. We love you, TT and GG! Thank you to James Burke for taking photos to make our book better!!

Kaitlyn, as you walk down the halls of high school for the last time and steps that take you farther away from the little girl you will always be to me, know that I am always right here, ready to take you back in my arms and hold your hand for the few brief moments you'll need. I know that no matter where life's path takes you, you will succeed ... and you will be cherished.
